GRAND JURY INDICTS PROMINENT MEN ON CONSPIRACY CHARGES.

By United Press.
New York, Dec. 29.—A new grand jury will be sworn in Tuesday to investigate all alien conspiracies against the United States for the last sixteen months. Indictments are expected in connection with the alleged Mexican revolutionary plot which resulted in the arrest of Huerta in Texas last summer. One official said the indictment of eight alleged labor conspirators late yesterday is "just a good beginning."

The grand jury investigation just closed is believed to have established David Lamar, the "Wolf of Wall Street," as disbursing agent for Franz Von Rintlen, the German agent under arrest in England. The latter's activities will be further investigated especially in relation to the Mexican plot. The Department of Justice is known to be taking renewed interest in Huerta's case and ordered a complete investigation pending a clean up of the intervention plot.

The indictment returned Tuesday include, besides Lamar and Von Rintlen, Congressman Frank Buchanan of Illinois; Former Congressman H. R. Fowler of Illinois; Frank S. Monnet, former attorney general of Ohio; H. B. Martin, Herman Schultis, Jacob C. Taylor. All are charged with attempting to foment labor troubles in manufacturing establishments with war contracts for the allies. All except Von Rintlen have been connected with the organization known as Labor's Peace Council.

PENSION BOARD WILL MEET MONDAY

Oklahoma City, Dec. 29.—Call was issued Tuesday for the quarterly meeting of the state board of pension commissioners to be held Monday in the office of Rev. W. D. Matthews, commissioner of charities and corrections, who is ex-officio chairman of the board. At this meeting it was announced, the board will add a number of new names to the rolls of those entitled to pensions, to take the place of persons who have died or who have been dropped from the list since the last meeting.

Since the last quarterly meeting of the board sixteen of the original 979 pensioners have died, three have been discontinued because their property holdings made them ineligible, two have refused to accept the pension further and three have left the state and are no longer eligible. The amount of money at the disposal of the pension board will not permit more than 1,000 names being on the rolls at one time. Each pensioner receives $5 a quarter. There are more than two thousand applications for pensions now on file in the office of the board. From these will be selected the names which will be added to take the place of those dropped since the last meeting.

The young lady had complained a little for a day or two, but her death was entirely unexpected. She was only about 20 years of age, just emerging from girlhood to young womanhood. A NEW YEAR RESOLUTION

The News is of the opinion that a New Year resolution which Ada should by all means make and live up to is to get in behind the commercial club and boost it as never before.

No town can hope to make much advancement while sitting quietly in the corner and watching the procession march by. No place can depend on its natural resources alone to put it on the map, for it must let the world know of these resources and the advantage of the location for profitable enterprises before it can hope to make much headway, and no place can handle this matter of interesting capital unless it has a live commercial club. People naturally expect to find a live organization in a live town and finding none at all, they are likely to conclude that the place is a dead one.

Ada is a young city of magnificent possibilities. Her past achievements have been notable ones, but all has been realized on them that can be hoped for and if the town is to grow it must have other industries. The citizenship as a whole has never been backward about going after and landing things, but to make any headway there must be organization, and at the head of an effective organization there must be a live secretary, and to maintain the organization requires money.

During the past year the commercial club of Ada has done a great deal of good for the city and every dollar paid into its treasury has been wisely expended. In the first place, it has done quite a little in the way of assisting in road building. In the next it conducted a most creditable county fair and entertained the Confederate state reunion with out calling for a general contribution which would have amounted to several hundred dollars. Last and greatest of all, it landed the glass casket factory which will give the city another good pay roll. Besides these things, the secretary has interested outside parties in Ada asphalt and pottery clay from which good results may hereafter be obtained, and is in constant communication with other industries. He could have done even more, but has been badly hampered all along for want of funds. Some who joined the club in a short time refused to pay their dues any longer and others have been too indifferent to even join.

The issue is now squarely up to the citizenship of Ada. Is the city to advance or fall back? Is it to be the leading place in this trade territory, or will it permit some other place to take from it what already belongs here? A commercial club is not a charitable organization and money paid into it is not a donation, but an investment from which all classes are to reap a reward later.

The SEA WOLF

CHAPTER XIX.

The chagrin Wolf Larsen felt from being ignored by Maud Brewster and me in the conversation at table had to express itself in some fashion, and it fell to Thomas Mugridge to be the victim. He had not mended his ways nor his shirt, though the latter he contended he had changed. The garment itself did not bear out the assertion, nor did the accumulations of grease on stove and pot and pan attest a general cleanliness.

"I've given you warning, Cooky," Wolf Larsen said, "and now you've got to take your medicine."

Mugridge's face turned white under its sooty veneer, and when Wolf Larsen called for a rope and a couple of men, the miserable cockney fled wildly out of the galley and dodged and ducked about the deck with the grinning crew in pursuit. Few things could have been more to their liking than to give him a tow over the side, for to the fore-castle he had sent messes and concoctions of the vilest order.

As usual, the watches below and the hunters turned out for what promised sport. Mugridge exhibited a nimbleness and speed we did not dream he possessed. Straight aft he raced, to the poop and along the poop to the stern. So great was his speed that as he curved past the corner of the cabin he slipped and fell. Nilson was standing at the wheel, and the cockney's hurtling body struck his legs. Both went down together, but Mugridge alone arose. By some freak of pressures, his frail body had snapped the strong man's leg like a pipestem.

Parsons took the wheel, and the pursuit continued. Round and round the decks they went, Mugridge sick with fear, the sailors hallooing and shouting directions to one another, and the hunters bellowing encouragement and laughter. Mugridge went down on the fore-hatch under three men; he emerged from the mass, bleeding at the mouth.

The battle was over, and Wolf Larsen rove a bowline in a piece of rope and slipped it under his shoulders. Then he was carried aft and flung into the sea. Forty, fifty, sixty feet of line ran out, when Wolf Larsen cried "Belay!" Oofty-Oofty took a turn on a bit, the rope tautened, and the Ghost, lunging onward, jerked the cook to the surface.

I had forgotten the existence of Maud Brewster, and I remembered her with a start as she stepped lightly beside me. It was her first time on deck since she had come aboard. A dead silence greeted her appearance.

Her eyes lighted on Oofty-Oofty, immediately before her, his body instinct with alertness and grace as he held the turn of the rope.

"Are you fishing?" she asked him. He made no reply. His eyes, fixed intently on the sea astern, suddenly flashed.

"Shark ho, sir!" he cried. "Heave in! Lively! All hands tail on!" Wolf Larsen shouted, springing himself to the rope in advance of the quickest.

Mugridge had heard the Kanaka's warning cry and was screaming madly. I could see a black fin cutting the water and making for him with greater swiftness than he was being pulled aboard. It was an even toss whether the shark or we would get him, and it was a matter of moments. When Mugridge was directly beneath us, the stern descended the slope of a passing wave, thus giving the advantage to the shark. Wolf Larsen threw his strength into one tremendous jerk. The cockney's body left the water; so did part of the shark's. He drew up his legs, and the man-eater seemed no more than barely to touch one foot, sinking back into the water with a splash. But at the moment of contact Thomas Mugridge cried out. Then he came in like a fresh-caught

Baking Helps

Learn to Regulate the Heat of Your Oven

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

There is just one way to make your cakes rise high and keep an even surface. Have your oven moderate at first, until the cake is fully risen; then increase the heat, so as to brown it over quickly. Extreme heat stiffens the dough. If you stiffen the outside of the cake before the rising is complete, you stop the rising process. Then the leavening gas, forming inside, will bulge up the center, where the dough is still soft, and spoil the shape of the cake.

NOTE—Biscuits or other pastries made from stiff dough, that are cut into shapes for the oven, bake in a hot oven. This is because the cut surfaces of the dough do not seal over, but rather leave the pores open, allowing the leavening gas to escape and the heat to penetrate readily. Small ovens cool quickly; therefore they should be made several degrees hotter than a larger oven, and the less the door is opened the better. Do not attempt to bake bread and pastry together. Bread requires prolonged, moderate baking—pastry the reverse.

Have a strong underheat for baking powder preparations, especially pastry.

These are only a few of the many baking helps found in the K C Cook's Book—a copy of which may be secured by sending the colored certificate taken from a 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the JAGUES MFG. Co., Chicago.

fish on a line, clearing the rail generously and striking the deck in a heap, on hands and knees, and rolling over.

But a fountain of blood was gushing forth. The right foot was missing, amputated neatly at the ankle. I looked instantly to Maud Brewster. Her face was white, her eyes dilated with horror. She was gazing, not at Thomas Mugridge, but at Wolf Larsen. And he was aware of it, for he said, with one of his short laughs:

"Man-play, Miss Brewster. Some-what rougher, I warrant, than what you have been used to, but still—man-play. The shark was not in the reckoning. It—"

But at this juncture, Mugridge, who had lifted his head and ascertained the extent of his loss, floundered over on the deck and buried his teeth in Wolf Larsen's leg. Wolf Larsen stooped, coolly, to the cockney, and pressed with thumb and finger at the rear of the jaws and below the ears. The jaws opened with reluctance, and Wolf Larsen stepped free.

"As I was saying," he went on as though nothing unwanted had happened, "the shark was not in the reckoning. It was—ahem—shall we say Providence?"

We walked to the break of the poop, where she turned and faced me. I glanced around to see that no one was within hearing distance.

"What is it?" I asked gently; but the expression of determination on her face did not relax.

"I can readily understand," she began, "that this morning's affair was largely an accident; but I have been talking with Mr. Haskins. He tells me that the day we were rescued, even while I was in the cabin, two men were drowned, deliberately drowned—murdered."

There was a query in her voice, and she faced me accusingly, as though I were guilty of the deed, or at least a party to it.

"The information is quite correct," I answered. "The two men were murdered."

"And you permitted it!" she cried. "I was unable to prevent it, is a better way of phrasing it," I replied, still gently.

"But you tried to prevent it?" There was an emphasis on the "tried," and a pleading little note in her voice.

"Oh, but you didn't," she hurried on, divining my answer. "But why didn't you?"

I shrugged my shoulders. "You must remember, Miss Brewster, that you are a new inhabitant of this little world, and that you do not yet understand the laws which operate within it. You bring with you certain fine conceptions of humanity, manhood, conduct, and such things; but here you find them misconceptions. I have found it so," I added, with an involuntary sigh.

She shook her head incredulously. "What would you advise, then?" I asked. "That I should take a knife, or a gun or an ax, and kill this man?"

She half started back. "No, not that!"

"Then what should I do? Kill myself?"

"You speak in purely materialistic terms," she objected. "There is such a thing as moral courage, and moral courage is never without effect."

"Ah," I smiled, "you advise me to kill neither him nor myself, but to let him kill me." I held up my hand as she was about to speak. "For moral courage is a worthless asset on this little floating world. Leach, one of the men who were murdered, had moral courage to an unusual degree. So had the other man, Johnson. Not only did it not stand them in good stead, but it destroyed them. And so with me if I should exercise what little moral courage I may possess."

"You must understand, Miss Brewster, and understand clearly, that this man is a monster. He is without conscience. Nothing is sacred to him, nothing is too terrible for him to do. It was due to his whim that I was detained aboard in the first place. It is due to his whim that I am still alive. I do nothing, can do nothing, because I am a slave to this monster, as you are now a slave to him; because I desire to live, as you will desire to live; because I cannot fight and overcome him, just as you will not be able to fight and overcome him."

She waited for me to go on.

"Dispense with all the moral courage you can," I said briskly. "Don't arouse this man's animosity. Be quite friendly with him, talk with him, discuss literature and art with him—he is fond of such things. You will find him an interested listener and no fool. And for your own sake try to avoid witnessing as much as you can, the brutalities of the ship. It will make it easier for you to act your part."

"I am to lie," she said in steady, rebellious tones, "by speech and action to lie."

Wolf Larsen had separated from Latimer and was coming toward us. I was desperate.

"Please, please understand me," I said hurriedly, lowering my voice. "All your experience of men and things is worthless here. You have already managed me with your eyes, commanded me with them. But don't try it on Wolf Larsen. You could as easily control a lion, while he would make a mock of you. He would—I have always been proud of the fact that I discovered him," I said, turning the conversation as Wolf Larsen stepped on the poop and joined us. "The editors were afraid of him and the publishers would have none of him. But I knew, and his genius and my judgment were vindicated when he made that magnificent hit with his 'Forge.'"

"And it was a newspaper poem," she said glibly.

"It did happen to see the light in a newspaper," I replied, "but not because the magazine editors had been denied a glimpse at it."

"We were talking of Harris," I said to Wolf Larsen.

"Oh, yes," he acknowledged. "I remember the 'Forge.' Filled with pretty sentiments and an almighty faith in human illusions. By the way, Mr. Van Weyden, you'd better look in on Cooky. He's complaining and restless."

Thus was I bluntly dismissed from the poop, only to find Mugridge sleeping soundly from the morphine I had given him. I made no haste to return on deck, and when I did I was gratified to see Miss Brewster in animated conversation with Wolf Larsen. As I say, the sight gratified me. She was following my advice. And yet I was conscious of a slight shock or hurt in that she was able to do the thing I had begged her to do and which she had notably disliked.

The Power of Your Penny

Not so long ago the best buyer was the man or woman who could "dicker." The buyer and seller spent hours in arriving at a satisfactory price. In those days the buyer could never be certain of the quality.

Advertising has benefited you in these two points, among other things. When you buy from THE NEWS' advertisers you do not have to haggle about the price, nor worry your mind about the quality. Both are fixed, and the best to be had in the city.

The power of your penny is increased, and has a more certain value through your reading advertisements. By closely and constantly reading THE NEWS' advertisements you can still further increase the buying power of your penny.

HOME OF JOHN THRASHER BURNED

About 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the home of John Thrasher on West Third street was burned. Only a few articles of furniture were saved. The fire company responded, but when it arrived some difficulty was found in getting hose enough to reach the house and in thawing out a frozen plug. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective flue as it was first observed burning around the flue. The house and furniture were partially insured.

No one was at home at the time the fire was discovered. Mrs. Thrasher is visiting in western Oklahoma and Mr. Thrasher, who is the linotype operator for the News, was on the way home from town. Not feeling well he had not worked during the day, but remained at home until 5 when he came to town for his mail. He was on the way home when the alarm was turned in.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

1915 REVIEW OF THE WAR

By BOND P. GEDDES

United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, Dec. 29.—An epochal year in the United States' relations with the world family of nations marked 1915. Serious crises marked the twelvemonth; and more threaten in 1916. This nation passed safely through the vortex of the world war and the tangled skein of war politics, though often very near severing relations with European powers its peace has been threatened from within and without.

The country faces in the new year more delicate problems, including new and old disputes with Europe's belligerents.

The killing of over 100 Americans on the high seas, destruction, seizure and attacks upon American vessels, ruthless confiscation of American property and interference with American commerce; dismissal of foreign diplomats resignation of its own Secretary of State, and European criticism of its neutrality were the outstanding events of 1915 in American world diplomacy.

Peaceful settlement of the dispute with Austria over her attack upon the Italian liner, Ancona, with England over her trade interferences, with Germany over the Lusitania incident and with the Teutonic powers over unneatrical conspiracies in this country were the quartet of dominant and delicate problems facing us in 1916.

Red Letter days on the 1915 calendar were: March 15—England's blockade of Germany; May 7—Sinking of the Lusitania; June 9—Secretary Bryan's resignation; Aug. 19—Sinking of the Arabic; Sept. 10—Recall of Austrian Ambassador Dumba; Oct. 4—Half billion loan to the allies; Nov. 9—Sinking of the Ancona; Dec. 3—Recall of German Capt. Boy-Ed and Von Papen.

These and numberless other entanglements of the war caused Uncle Sam to break all records in diplomatic not writing. Hundreds of notes were sent. The chief year's diplomatic victory was the enforced modification by Germany of her submarine warfare.

Today the United States stands with increased power and prestige, but still weighted with the task of perfecting peaceful settlements with England, France, Germany and Austria in most delicate and difficult complications. The passing year was rife with diplomatic dynamite. A chronicle of the more important international events follow.

JUDGE J. E. GRIGSBY ANNOUNCES FOR MAYOR

In announcing my candidacy for mayor, at the forthcoming election, I deem it not inappropriate to state, that this city has reached a point in its development, beyond its secondary stage, and is now making for first place among other cities in commercial and manufacturing importance, and for this, among many other reasons, there are abundant proofs, that it will not stop here. Of course, as the city grows larger the interests become more varied, more pronounced and more complex, and more or less importance is thus attached to the city government, for it is, to a marked extent the nucleus around which such interest gather seeking encouragement and protection. At this period of our progress, good government suggests, that nothing short of the exercise of a sound judgment and a liberal encouragement toward all enterprises, will meet the conditions and possible demands. This office will impose many responsibilities, but it should be understood, that there should not be any evasion of them, and that they should be squarely and fairly met. It is not deemed that the mayor should be more than an ordinary citizen, but he should be mindful of the exercise of a dispassionate and a well thought out judgment. All persons and businesses should shoulder and carry their just proportion of the burdens of government, and no considerations should be given the one, not in an equal degree accorded the other. In this country all of us are upon the same footing, and entitled to the equal protection of the laws, and position in the community should not have a tendency toward withholding that protection and fair treatment. The officers, assistants and employees of the departments of the city government should be selected with the sole view of securing fitness, efficiency and promptness in the discharge of all duties imposed by law, and nothing short of this will meet the approval of our citizens. Sanitation should be specially fostered and maintained, and made effective in all parts of the city, and this to the extent of insuring beneficial and wholesome results. The fire department should be liberally encouraged. The good order and peace of the city should be maintained, and the police department should be officered by men of firmness and unquestioned character and having a fixed and determinate disposition to honestly and diligently enforce the laws, and the writer hereof stands committed to a high moral standard and the enforcement of all the laws of the city. Consistent with competent service, the city government should be operated economically, and retrenchment made where it is found that the same can be done. I am no politician, but the views herein expressed, are in accord with my ideas as a citizen of the city, and as occasion may arise, will be enlarged upon. I therefore solicit your consideration and support. Respectfully,
J. E. GRIGSBY.

UNITED PRESS MAN VISITS GERMAN INTERNMENT CAMP

By WILBUR S. FORREST
United Press Staff Correspondent.

London, Dec. 2.—(By Mail)—When a German torpedo destroyed the Lusitania, May 7, causing riots and the subsequent wholesale internment of enemy aliens, England kept its solution of the difficult internment problem strictly secret. After seven months the United Press is able today, through the courtesy of the War Office, to tell the story for the first time.

British leniency and German thoroughness have co-ordinated to make England's enemy internment business a positive success. Five London Bobbies and a ten foot fence of American barbed wire guard 750 of the Kaiser's military eligibles at Islington, North London. Inside a great central building and auxiliary structures which in ante-bellum days composed a municipal refuge for the poor, is today a model system of self government where 750 "citizens" have worked out their own restricted salvation for the duration of the war.

Take note of the Germans you would meet on the streets of Milwaukee, St. Louis or Cincinnati and you would know the appearance of the personnel at Islington. Almost all these were business heads, clerks, bakers, butchers, barbers, cabinet-makers bookbinders or tradesmen in London before the Lusitania riots. In May hundreds of them were bundled up and sent to Islington, away from harm and mischief.

The 750 were placed in charge of Major Halladay, who has seen service in India. He divided the internees into units of between 30 and 40 and instructed each group to elect its captain. The captains met and elected a Captain of Captains, a wealthy Prussian business man of London before the war. Presided over by this dignitary, a council of captains is held daily to adjudicate disputes, consider claims and administer business. If judgment of this body is unsatisfactory the case may be passed to Major Halladay.

The latest internee at Islington is a German merchant, enjoying an income of $125,000 a year. He was unable to secure one of the few private rooms reserved at $3.60 per week because other internees had taken them. He appealed to the council of captains. The democratic spirit of this unique tribunal asserted itself and the applicant was politely informed that his $3.60 was no better than anyone's in Islington's "Germany". He appealed to Major Halladay. The Major replied that he felt compelled to abide by the decision of the lower court.

The wealthy citizen was forced to occupy regulation quarters. These quarters, in the main building, are ample. They consist of highwalled, well ventilated, rooms where from eight to fifteen sanitary couches are ranged along the walls. On each is a mattress, blankets and pillow. These together with general lavatories, wash rooms and bath rooms on every floor, make this internment camp more like a well planned hotel. Large day rooms where visitors may be entertained, a commodious yard with a rain shelter, workshops, a tennis court, dining rooms and tea rooms make it unnecessary for the men to occupy their sleeping quarters during daylight.

Afternoon tea is a daily event. Here is the routine: Arise at eight; breakfast at 8:30; work study or diversion until noon (working is optional but hundreds are busy at various tasks under supervision of the Council of Captains); dinner at 12; work, or entertain wives and children until five; tea with trimmings, 5 to 5:30; supper at 7; to bed at nine.

Other unique features are: Unrestricted smoking, except in wood-working shop, bimonthly theatricals; a weekly paper printed in English; privilege of writing two letters each week in German, to Germany or elsewhere; opportunity of leaving the premises under guard, for medical treatment, teetotalism.

All citizens of the Islington camp are married hundreds of them to British wives. Each man is allowed to see his family once in 8 days for 30 minutes. When the United Press man arrived forty families were strolling about the enclosure. Many families live now near the camp of their husbands or brothers. Every wife, if in want receives a grant of $2.76 per week with an additional 36 cents for every child.

When an enemy alien reaches Islington he deposits his cash with the commandant and keeps $5 or $10. This pocket change circulates rapidly. A laundry, manned by internees furnishes clean linen at twelve cents a week. There is a four-chair barber shop where shaves cost four cents in the morning and two cents in the afternoon, on the systematic German version that it is worth more to be shaved up all day than half a day. A former delikatesen shop owner of Houndslow, sells genuine German liverwurst, and other Teutonic palate ticklers; there are workshops where experts, are making Christmas toys for their children. These child delights are not stamped made in Germany, but they bear the stamp of perfect workmanship. Another shop turns out fancy toilet requisites for the wife's Christmas which she may sell. Another is making wood-inlay work. A large bakery daily turns out 1800 pounds of bread. In all these occupations the government furnishes the material and equipment.

"The plan of co-operation allows the government to feed the men at an average cost of $1.08 a week," said the commandant. "The food is wholesome and good. Our kitchen is manned by Germans who know how to cook and economize. Scores of our men are learning Spanish. German far-sightedness tells them that England will not be the place for a German's business for some time after peace is declared. Many have told me they are going to South America. Not one man has attempted to escape."

The only essential that Islington's model community lacks is a dentist and he will be interned within a few days, drill, forceps, chair and all.

Oil and Gas News

In the well of the Texas-Oklahoma Syndicate (Tidewater) it was discovered that salt water was coming in through a defective shoe where some salt water was found at about 1100 feet and trickling to the recently discovered gas sand. This is being shut off today and drilling will proceed. No salt water is found with the sand itself. The owners are still exceedingly optimistic over the prospect of making a good strike of oil before penetrating to a much greater depth than at present.

Artificial Bones.

A new method of mending a fractured bone has been discovered by an English doctor. He dries and grinds to powder a piece of fresh bone, and this powder he mixes to the consistency of a paste with petrolatum, and properly sterilizes the mixture. After the ends of the fractured bones have been brought into proper relations, and the location ascertained by digital examination and X-ray, a syringe having a long needle is filled with the warmed bone mixture, and the needle is inserted to the seat of the fracture, and as deeply as possible between the fractured ends. The contents of the needle are then injected as the needle is slowly withdrawn to the surface of the bone, when the injection must stop. This procedure may be repeated several times at different angles, thus filling the entire space between the fractured ends with the petrolatum and bone cells, which act as a focus for the formation of new bone.

Grass Widow's Grievance.

"That fortune teller got all mixed up on my husbands," said the grass widow as she left the seventh daughter, with an escort holding tight. "She said I had had two; then she wouldn't say I would have three. I thought that mean of her. Instead, she kept on saying what a nice husband I had now, what a fine maz he was, and all that idiocy. Why, my husband is the meanest little brute that ever lived. I haven't laid eyes on him for two years. Now, why do you suppose that fortune teller kept on saying he was such a nice husband?" she demanded. "That's easy," said the escort. "She thought I was your husband and she'd get to tell my fortune when she had finished yours."
